When you can reach the Pokémon Nursery, head inside and talk to the woman standing next to the Toxel. Other Gen 8 Pokémon that have unique evolution methods, include Applin, Milcery, Sinistea, Sirfetch'd and Yamask. Due to it being a dual type Pokémon, poison and electric, Toxicity can be a highly useful member of your party. This ability to paralyse other Pokémon also makes it a good choice for when you want to catch new Pokémon in the Wild Area, because it will help prevent your targets from attacking you, making them easier to catch. At Level 52 Amped Form Toxtricity can learn Shift Gear, which is a steel-type attack. This huge Toxicity pulls out an electric guitar and has various colored "protrusions" on his chest. Give that mint to your Toxel and when it evolves to level 30, you'll get the Toxicity of your choice based on the nature it has. At present, it looks like the Amped Form and the Low Key Form both look like this when Gigantamaxing. Toxicity has two different forms based on the nature of the Toxel it evolves from: Amped or Low Key. To get either Amped or Low Key Toxicity, your Toxel needs to have a certain nature before evolving. This attack increases both the Defence and Special Defence of an ally Pokémon that has the Plus or Minus Ability. If you want to catch more than one Toxel, so you can have both forms in your Pokédex, then you'll need to catch him in the old fashioned way. I've included a map above showing this Pokémon's habitats. The range of poison and electric moves that Toxicity can learn also makes it an effective status attacker, either poisoning or paralyzing their opponent. Luckily, Toxel isn't that hard of a Pokémon to obtain or evolve. This Toxel will grow up to be an Amped Form Toxtricity. She'll explain how the Toxel just hatched from an egg and will gift the Pokémon to you. In order to get a Gigantamaxing Pokémon, you'll need to find him in a Pokémon Raid Den in the Wild Area. The pair of forms have some cosmetics differences and unique abilities worth knowing before you evolve. This Toxicity has a Naive nature Game Freak, The Pokémon Company/Nintendo via Polygon However, if you've made it late into the game and have access to the Battle Tower in Wyndon, you can buy mints to change a Pokémon's nature. On top of that, I think he and his final evolutions look pretty cool. Toxel will evolve into an Amped Form Toxtricity has any of the following natures: Adamant Brave Docile Hardy Hasty Impish Jolly Lax Naive Naughty Quirky Rash Sassy If you'd prefer a Low Key Form Toxtricity, however, then you need a Toxel with one of the following natures: Bashful Bold Calm Careful Gentle Lonely Mild Modest Quiet Relaxed Serious Timid If you're Toxel doesn't have the correct nature, then it's time to go hunting for a new one. I'll start with the easiest first: Right after you've defeated the Turffield Grass-type gym, if you head to Route 5, you'll eventually see the Pokémon Nursery. Amped Form has a yellow and purple look, while Low Key goes for blue and purple. This guide will show you how. When the next page pops up, Select Pokémon. The Low Key Form learns Magnetic Flux, an Electric-type attack that raises the defense and special defense of one of the Pokémon in your party. On this page: The easiest way to get a Toxel in either Pokémon Sword and Shield is to visit the Pokémon Nursery on Route 5. Whether it evolves into an Amped Toxicity or Low Key Toxicity, depends on the nature of your Toxel. Something I love about them is that they play air guitar when they're thrown into a battle. Aside from coloring, the main difference between the two is that they learn different final attacks at level 52 and they have the potential to know different Hidden Abilities. Good luck with your Pokémon adventure! Not only will it easily take care of any water-type Pokémon, making it a great choice the second Gym, but it also has an advantage over both grass and fairy-type Pokémon. A Toxel with a calm, quiet, nature will evolve into a Low Key Form Toxtricity, while one with a more active, excitable, nature will evolve into an Amped Toxicity. Like its pre-evolution, both forms of Toxicity are Poison and Electric-type Pokémon. If evolving both of them is too much of a hassle, at least you now know which natures evolve into which form, and you can focus on getting the final evolution you like best. While the first half of their evolution is easy — you just need to get it to level 30 — the second half may seem uncontrollable at first. Amped Toxicity sports a yellow and purple coloration and the final ability it learns at level 52, Shift Gear, is a steel-type attack. For Isle of Armor players, here's how to find the Slowpoke, where to find Max Mushroom locations, and how to get Kubfu, become best friends and evolve it, plus all Diglett locations too! For the base game, here's info on the ability to transfer Pokémon to Pokémon Home, the Wild Area, lists of all TM locations and TRs, all Galarian forms and finally our main Pokémon Sword and Shield walkthrough for the whole game. Source: @ProfasiaGaming on YouTube Gigantamax Toxtricity kinda looks like what a Sableye would evolve into if it actually evolved. Toxel locations. It evolves into one of two Toxicity forms, so you'll at least want to evolve two of them to complete your Pokédex. Ampled Toxicity needs one of these natures before evolving: Adamant Brave Docile Hardy Hasty Impish Jolly Lax Naive Naughty Quirky Rash Sassy To get a Low Key Toxicity, you need these natures: Bashful Bold Calm Careful Gentle Lonely Mild Modest Quiet Relaxed Serious Timid There's two ways to ensure your Toxel has the right nature. Another thing to note, is that Toxicity can Gigantamax. One such trickster Pokémon is this purple, Poison/Electric creature called Toxel. Here's how to catch Toxel and how to get both the Amped Form and the Low Key Form of Toxicity. Game Freak, The Pokémon Company/Nintendo via Polygon Toxel has one of the most unique evolutions in Pokémon Sword and Shield. On Route 7 Toxel will appear as a random encounter, while, in the Wild Area, you'll be able to see it walking about. Source: iMore Catching them all can be a little tricky with certain Pokémon, especially when there are multiple variants or tricks to catching a Pokémon to begin with. To discover what nature your Toxel has find it in either your Pokémon party or in one of your boxes, select it and then choose the option for "Check summary." Next scroll sideways until you reach the pencil and paper icon. A Pokémon's nature will be highlighted in blue. The Amped Form learns Shift Gear, a Steel-type attack that raises Toxicity's attack and speed. Using it will raise both Toxicity's attack and speed stat. Each mint will cost you 50 Battle Points, but using the list above, you just simply need to buy the right mint for the version of Toxicity you want. They're truly the rock stars of Pokémon Sword and Shield. You can constantly catch them in the habitats below until you find one of the right nature. Toxel's unique evolution method involves you paying close attention to its nature. Source: iMore I both love and hate it when there's a trick to getting every Pokémon in the Pokédex. Toxel can be found wherever you see a skull on this map Game Freak, The Pokémon Company/Nintendo via Polygon To check a Pokémon's nature, go to your Pokémon menu, then select a creature from your party or box, choose "Check summary," then scroll to the second to last icon which shows off their nature in the first line. The Hidden Ability for Amped Form is Plus, whereas the Hidden Ability for Low Key Form is Minus. Your Pokémon's nature will always be the first piece of information on this page and will be highlighted in blue. Natures needed for either Toxicity form Natures that evolve into the Amped Form of Toxicity: Adamant Brave Docile Hardy Hasty Impish Jolly Lax Naive Naughty Quirky Rash Sassy Natures that evolve into the Low Key Form of Toxicity: Bashful Bold Calm Careful Gentle Lonely Mild Modest Quiet Relaxed Serious Timid How to check your Toxel's nature While your game is on, Press X to enter the main menu. The completionist in me is excited to catch them all, but the lazy gamer just wants everything to be easily catchable. Enter and talk to the woman on the right to obtain Toxel. The second difference is the final attack each form can learn by levelling up. If you want more Toxel, then you can easily catch them in both the Wild Area and Route 7. He can be found in a few different areas around the Galar region's Wild Area. In this section of your Pokémon's summary you'll discover where, when and at what level you caught this Pokémon, a line about its personality and, most importantly, what nature your Pokémon has. Your Toxel's nature and description will display. Paralyzing a Pokémon also increases the chance of capture! If you're looking for more advice on the unique evolution methods for Gen 8 Pokémon, then check out our guide on evolving Applin, Milcery, Sinistea, Sirfetch'd and Yamask. Low Key Toxicity is purple and blue and its final move is Magnetic Flux, which is an electric-type ability. Source: iMore There are two ways to get Toxel. The form this Pokémon evolves into depends on your Toxel's nature. However, for this to work, that Pokémon must have the Plus or Minus Ability. Source: iMore Use the joystick or right Joy-Con buttons to scroll over to the pencil and paper icon. The obvious difference between Amped and Low Key Form Toxicity is their appearance. Toxicity forms and their differences Source: iMore Toxel starts evolving once he reaches level 30. Party like a rock star Now that you know how to get both rock star Pokémon, you can add both to your party. Source: iMore If Toxel is in your party, hover over him and press A. Select Check Summary. Plus, here's how to catch Calyrex, Glastrier and Spectrier, the Regieleki and Regidrago puzzle solution and Regirock, Regice, Registeel locations, details on how to catch Legendary Birds Articuno, Zapdos and Moltres in the Crown Tundra, the Ultra Beasts and Necrozma adventure, Dynamax Adventures, including the legends you can catch on these adventures, and the new Crown Tundra Pokédex and returning Pokémon explained. Low Key Form Toxicity, however, learns Magnetic Flux, an electric-type attack, at Level 52. If it's not in your party, press R to go to your Boxes and then click on it. There are, however, two different forms Toxicity can take - Low Key or Amped. Toxel, a Gen 8 Pokémon introduced in Pokémon Sword and Shield, evolves into Toxicity at Level 30. Here are the sections of the Wild Area Toxel appears in and what weather must be occurring: Wild Area Location Weather Bridge Field Sunny, Raining, Thunder Giant's Cap Thunder Hammerlocke Hills Thunder Stony Wilderness Thunder Motostoke Riverbank Thunder Toxel will evolve into Toxicity at Level 30. However, if you've made it to the late game, getting your Toxel to evolve into one of the two versions of Toxicity is quite easy. You'll be able to access this area after you defeat Milo the leader of the grass-type gym at Tuffield. With it finally in the wild, here's how to start the Crown Tundra DLC and our full Pokémon Crown Tundra walkthrough. Visit the Pokémon Nursery on Route 5 for a Free Toxel.
